

Our first Pacific port was Hawaii where we officially became part of the Navy. We spent a busy week there making the necessary transition and trying to absorb as much as possible of the islands at the same time. Seven days later, with Diamond Head, Waikiki, Pearl Harbor, the sand and surf, and the hula girls all behind us, we were underway again, sailing westward into the mysterious Realm of the Golden Dragon and the Eastern Hemisphere.

